for Genealogists

Speaker: Marna Ambroselli

Most of us know that Facebook is great for keeping family members and friends connected, but you may not be aware of how many different ways Social Media can be used for genealogical research. Many genealogists enjoy adapting new technologies to their own purposes, and this has happened with Facebook too.

During this talk, learn on which pages to ask your family history questions, how to make connections with other researchers, and how to explore Facebook Groups and Communities to find what you need. Facebook can give you access to experts, documents, translations, maps, and much more. This talk is aimed at those who want to find out some new ways that this tool can be applied to genealogical research. The Senior Center's Connections Cafe and other resources are available for basic instruction on the “Hows” of getting on Facebook, but come and be inspired by our speaker as we learn about the “Whys” of getting on Facebook for genealogy research!

Our presenter, Marna Ambroselli, is a creative family history researcher who speaks and blogs about genealogy and loves combining technological innovations with genealogy research.
